PERSON CENTERED PLANNING METHODS – MAPS & PATH

Person Centered Planning Methods is a two-day interactive training designed for people responsible for or interested in developing Person Centered Plans. Participants will learn their role as a facilitator and the difference between developing person centered plans that lead to a desired future and the traditional annual planning meetings. Participants will learn and practice MAPS and PATH planning methods including the roles and expectations of both the process facilitator and the graphics facilitator. Each person participating will have the opportunity to be a part of developing a plan during the training. Participants will also explore how planning fits with Rule 245D, the Positive Support Rule and the Olmstead Plan. *The 2-day Person Centered Thinking training is a prerequisite for this training.
